

Robert grew up on a farm in Pelion, SC, with his parents Bennett and Annie Belle and younger brothers James, Edwin, and Derwin. He enjoyed telling us stories about their shenanigans on the farm, and the last story he shared about his childhood was when he accidentally “stole” one of his friend’s toy cars. When he got home from playing, he realized he’d put the car in his pocket and forgot to return it. To avoid getting in trouble, he decided to bury it. James saw him getting rid of the evidence and immediately ratted him out to their dad. Bennett made Robert walk to the friend’s house to return the car and apologize. Since they lived in the country, the house was a few miles away! Don’t worry, Bennett followed in his truck to make sure he was safe. Robert confessed there was much crying during this trek of shame.

In honor of adorable baby Robert (who was a terrible criminal but a major chocoholic), steal yourself a Baby Ruth.
